Elise A. Fialkowski of Klasko Immigration Law Partners, LLP Speaks at 2018 NAFSA Annual Conference

Klasko Immigration Law Partners, LLP is pleased to announce its active participation at this year's 2018 NAFSA Conference in Philadelphia that concluded on Friday, June 1, 2018.

On Thursday, May 31, Elise Fialkowski, led the panel entitled "Hot Topics in Advanced Employment-Based Immigration." Those who attended this panel learned the key updates on employment-based immigration including the latest issues in H-1B visas, PERM, and compliance. Full event details on Fialkowski's speaking engagement can be found here.

Every year, the NAFSA Annual Conference offers attendees the opportunity to learn, network, and find inspiration in the exciting field of international education. In addition to Fialkowski's speaking engagement, Klasko Immigration Law Partners, LLP is also pleased to have supported NAFSA's mission by sponsoring the Friday Plenary speaker on June 1, renowned author and journalist Terry Gross. Gross, who is the long-time host of Fresh Air on National Public Radio, gave an inspiring speech touching on her experience as a journalist, covering notable celebrity and political interviews, and answering questions from the audience.

The 2018 NAFSA Conference and its theme, "Diverse Voices, Shared Commitment" highlighted the value and power that diverse voices lend to authentic collaborations and creative solutions to challenges in international education. For effective collaboration, all voices involved need to have a shared commitment and desire to meet these challenges together as one. NAFSA brings together a wide array of attendees from varying backgrounds and different professional and geographic perspectives, but they all have one thing in common—a commitment to the core values of international education.
