Klasko Immigration Law Partners Welcomes Timothy D'Arduini as New Partner and Expands into Washington, DC

Internationally renowned employment-based immigration law firm Klasko Immigration Law Partners is excited to welcome Timothy D'Arduini as its newest attorney and partner. Tim joined Klasko Immigration effective Friday, December 1.

Tim is located in Washington, DC, and will be managing the firm's new DC office location. He will be an essential part of the firm's growth in the Mid-Atlantic region, and play a key role in sustaining and enhancing our national and international capabilities.

Tim's integration into the firm broadens the roster of accomplished Klasko attorneys. He is ranked in Chambers USA as an "Up and Coming" attorney and in The Legal 500 U.S. as a "Rising Star".

H. Ronald Klasko, managing partner of Klasko Immigration Law Partners, remarked, "Tim's reputation for exemplary immigration work, infused with business-savvy counsel, precedes him. We are excited to welcome another renowned partner to the firm. Tim is certainly an excellent addition to the leadership of the firm, and we are eager to support his future accomplishments."

The Klasko corporate immigration team welcomes Tim's notable corporate clients, as well as startups, emerging enterprises, and individuals. He will expand the global immigration and mobility practice at the firm, bringing expertise that will be an asset to the firm's current clients. He also brings with him extensive compliance experience that will enhance the firm's established worksite compliance practice area.

"Tim's wealth of knowledge about immigration program management for clients from industry-leading financial services companies in the Fortune 100 to rapidly growing tech startups would be a great asset to any top immigration firm. Tim also brings a level of creativity to solve complex problems for individuals and smaller companies which makes him a great fit for our practice. His experience with management of immigration and global relocation programs for non-US destinations will also complement and grow our firm's practice in that important area," said William Stock, leader of the Corporate Immigration Team at Klasko Immigration Law Partners.

"I am excited to join Klasko and launch its DC office. The firm and its partners have such a premier reputation as thought leaders in the market, consistently pushing the envelope to provide the most creative solutions to its clients. That ingenuity—and the desire to deepen its capability in global immigration and mobility—are what attracted me to the firm and make it an optimal platform for the clients with whom I have deep relationships. I also hope to support the firm's well-known impact on immigration policy and litigation by augmenting the firm's extensive network of immigration law policymakers and practitioners with my relationships inside and outside the Beltway." said Tim D'Arduini.

Beyond his immigration work, Tim also brings with him experience in managing and cultivating a diverse legal team where team members' background and opinions are included in how they practice together and serve clients. "I believe, firmly, that our clients are best served by having people with different personal and professional backgrounds representing them. Infusing who you are into your work—with team members and clients—inspires creativity, makes us all feel valued, and produces the most multi-dimensional result. Collective creativity is what makes magic happen." D'Arduini said. In its 20-year history, Klasko Immigration has championed this type of diverse, equitable, and inclusive workplace and enthusiastically welcomes Tim's efforts in this area.

Klasko Immigration is proud to welcome Tim D'Arduini to the firm and encourages any organization in need of a corporate immigration lawyer to schedule a consultation with Tim. To learn more about Klasko Immigration Law Partners, please visit KlaskoLaw.com.
