Nick has worked in immigration law for nearly a decade and is a senior attorney in the Firm's Washington, DC office. A member of the Firm's Corporate, Worksite Compliance, and Removal Defense teams, he represents clients across industries and of all sizes—from Fortune 100 financial institutions to startups in the non-profit space to individual applicants.

Nick is known for his creativity and superior client service. Throughout his career, he has focused on improving technologies across firms to better support clients, increase compliance, and enhance efficiency.

Nick's practice primarily focuses on two subject areas: business immigration and worksite compliance. He has in-depth experience advising employers and their people across the full range of employment-based temporary and permanent visa categories. Nick has also supported clients through both family-based and humanitarian immigration processes, including Uniting for Ukraine parole and the Processes for Haitians, Cubans, Nicaraguans, and Venezuelans. In terms of worksite compliance, he leads clients through large-scale I-9 compliance audits, provides strategic policy consulting, and offers detailed compliance trainings to enhance compliance programs. He also provides consultations with clients on unique I-9 issues, including suspect document assessments, immigration-related fraud, and anti-discrimination policies.

Nick is also on the Firm's Removal Defense team, representing individual clients in
